the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 600 million to 800 million (FAO 1996).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. First, the world population has increased from 5 billion in 1987 to 6 billion in 1997, and is projected to reach 8 billion by 2025 (UNEP 1997). Second, the world population is becoming increasingly urbanized, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Third, the world population is becoming increasingly aged, and this is increasing the demand for food. Fourth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Fifth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, and this is increasing the demand for food. Sixth, the world population is becoming increasingly affluent, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Seventh, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, and this is increasing the demand for food. Eighth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Ninth, the world population is becoming increasingly affluent, and this is increasing the demand for food. Tenth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Eleventh, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, and this is increasing the demand for food. Twelfth, the world population is becoming increasingly affluent, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Thirteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, and this is increasing the demand for food. Fourteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Fifteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly affluent, and this is increasing the demand for food. Sixteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Seventeenth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, and this is increasing the demand for food. Eighteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly affluent, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Nineteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, and this is increasing the demand for food. Twentieth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Twenty-first, the world population is becoming increasingly affluent, and this is increasing the demand for food. Twenty-second, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, and this is increasing the demand for food.

Twenty-third, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, and this is increasing the demand for food. Twenty-fourth, the world population is becoming increasingly affluent, and this is increasing the demand for food.
